NAILBITER SPRING COVID-19 ANALYSIS

In response to the unprecedented global pandemic, NAILBITER partnered with RB and the Category Management Association to track 1000+ shoppers from March 15 to April 21 and observe their behaviors as they shopped in store and online, as well as at home consumption.

KEY THEMES FROM THE SPRING

NAILBITER uncovered several key themes regarding COVID-19's initial impact on US consumers. Top themes included:

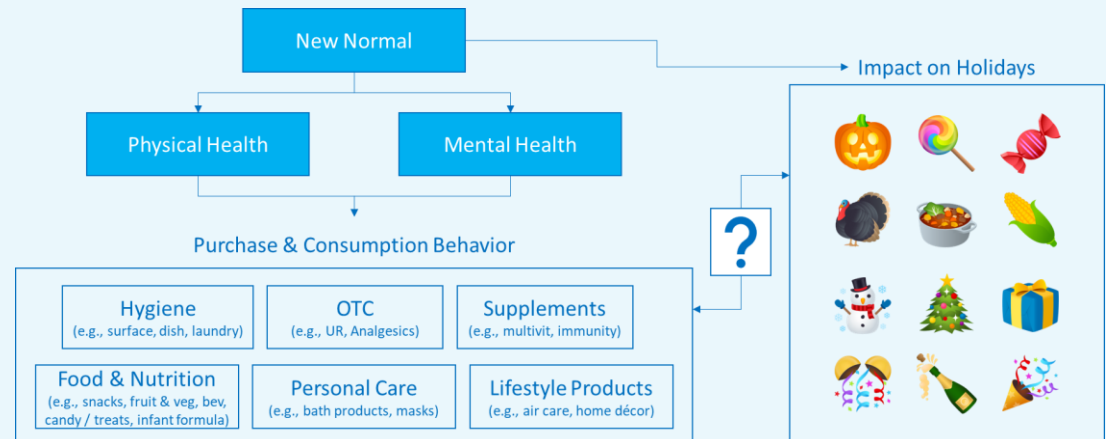

- Instability is part of the New Normal – the situation is evolving and will continue to do so
- Safety concerns & precautions are not temporary and helping shoppers feel safe should be a top priority
- Consumption & shopping behaviors have fundamentally changed, and new habits are being created and solidified

NAILBITER FALL COVID-19 ANALYSIS

COVID-19 continues to impact consumer health, both mental & physical, resulting in continued shifts in behaviors that have material implications for categories, retailers, and brands.

Strategic Question:

1. What does health (physical and mental) mean in the New Normal? How does this impact categories, retailers, and brands?
2. What impact can we expect on upcoming holidays and how consumers intend to celebrate and practice their traditions?

1. MENTAL HEALTH IS AS IMPORTANT AS PHYSICAL HEALTH

Physical and Mental Health are inextricably linked, and the stress of these trying times impacts all facets of shoppers' and consumers' health.

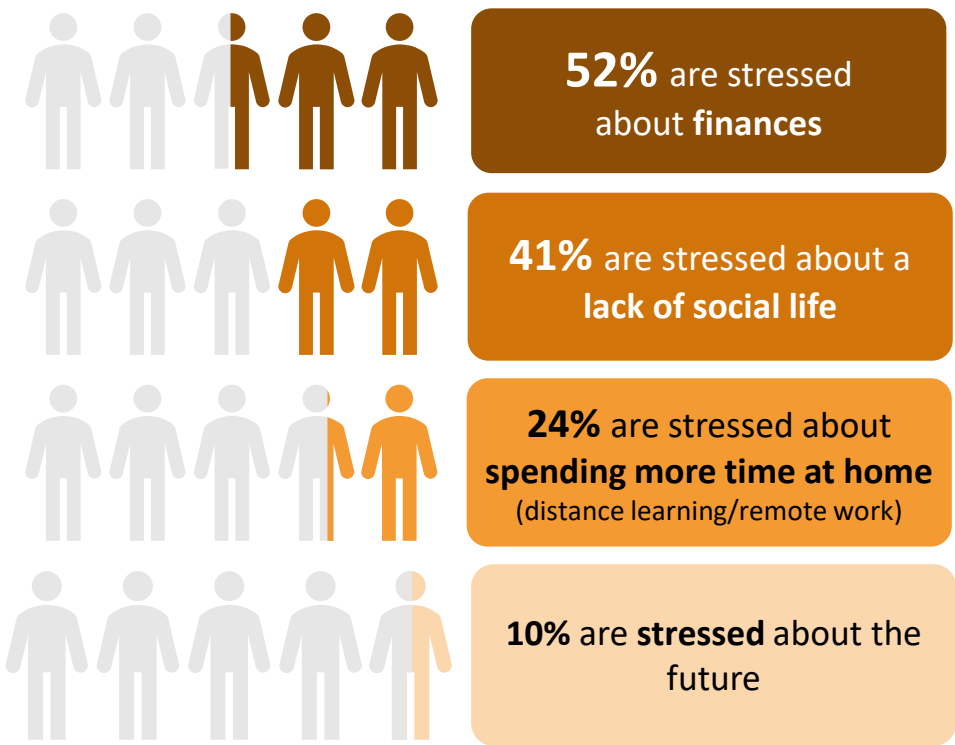

As consumers develop coping mechanisms, they will be establishing new habits that may become permanent creating an opportunity for CPG brands to be part of the habit.

COVID-19 has brought high levels of stress into consumers' lives. Finances, isolation, and changes to day-to-day life have left many struggling with the current state of their lives.

COVID RELATED STRESSES

"I'm really sad and stressed about our finances because my husband has lost work hours at his job so money is really tight in our household with no end in sight."

"My family and I miss going out and gathering with our friends/family. Because we cannot, life is boring for the children and exhausting for us as parents."

"Remote learning is mentally stressful because I have to deal with a lot of complaining and e-mailing teachers when things are not clear, then I have to always wait on a response."

Although Physical Health remains a concern during the pandemic, more consumers are concerned about their Mental well being. Understanding consumers’ holistic health needs is critical to providing relief and comfort.

HOW STRESS IMPACTS HEALTH: PHYSICAL VS. MENTAL HEALTH

7 in 10 say these stresses impact their Physical Health

"I am pre-diabetic with high blood pressure so because of that I get more headaches due to constantly worrying and hoping my body will react in a positive way and not negatively if I get the virus."

"I work with children so I have to always clean and make sure we are social distancing which is constant drain on me physically to maintain as part of my job."

"The stress level on me mentally has taken its toll - I don't tell my family but it has!"

9 in 10 are concerned about their Mental Health

Just as health concerns are both Mental & Physical, so too are the tactics consumers use to cope with the added stress. For example, while shoppers are eating out less to both maintain social distance as well as making healthier meals, they are also indulging in their favorite comfort foods to destress.

COPING METHODS

PHYSICAL HEALTH

MENTAL HEALTH

Eating Out Less

"We used to go out to stores and restaurants and buy all the junk food but now because of this situation, we are not going out. And, at the same time, I got a lot of time to actually think about what is healthy and what is not healthy for my family and for myself."

"I buy cookies because they are my comfort food. When I feel sad or down they make me feel really good."

Eating Comfort Food

Food will continue to play an integral role in how consumers cope ,and the habits they develop today may likely persist post-COVID

Other habits also exist along the spectrum of coping methods with some providing a physical benefit (e.g. disinfecting), while also giving consumers the peace of mind.

“During the pandemic I started buying more Vitamin C and Vitamin D. I stocked up on and cough medicine and I’ve been eating more healthy foods and exercising more. I’m becoming more conscious because health is so important to protection from COVID.”

“We are using our dishwasher more often than we did before COVID because our dishwashing is important to making sure everything is sanitized.”

“I feel like shampoos and conditioners really help boost my mood when they have a great scent and I’m taking a nice hot shower It’s very relaxing.”

“I keep buying more of the Keebler cookies. It’s a comfort food kind of thing. I don’t eat to deal with stress, but after a long day of work, its to have some familiarity.”

Across the spectrum of Mental & Physical Health, CPG categories play a key role in consumers' habits. Understanding the role of a given category is vital to identifying how to best serve consumers' needs.

WHAT CATEGORIES ARE THEY BUYING FOR THEIR HEALTH?

Categories like Air Care offer a therapeutic benefit, while categories like Vitamins & Supplements serve multiple needs by both keeping someone physically healthy and providing comfort.

WHAT PRODUCTS ARE THEY BUYING FOR THEIR HEALTH?

2. CONSUMERS CONTINUE TO DERIVE COMFORT FROM THEIR FAVORITE BRANDS

At the point of purchase, nearly 2 in 3 shoppers use Brand as a key Reason for Purchase, and this number has steadily grown. In addition, consumers are beginning to look to their brands to offer benefits across both physical and mental health.

CPG brands should consider leveraging trends such as BFY and Wholesome Indulgence to further drive consideration.

At the point of purchase, nearly 2 in 3 shoppers use brand as a key Reason for Purchase and this number has steadily grown. Shopper often turn to their go-to favorites to bring in normalcy during an anything-but-normal time.

BRAND AS A REASON FOR PURCHASE

"I am being extra cautious because of the pandemic and I want something that I can trust to keep frequently touched surfaces clean. I know that Lysol All Purpose Cleaner can that do with my kitchen counter and my bathroom. I won't buy any other brand."

"The Garnier Fructis shampoos and conditioners really help boost my mood because they have a great scent to them and when I'm taking a nice hot shower and I've got my brand that I know smells really good. It's very relaxing."

"These Chips Ahoy cookies keep me sane right now. My family and I consume these on a regular basis. The fact that I know I love these cookies so I keep getting them and they just help me keep me sane, especially when I get bored."

"We really love Snyder's Pretzels because they make us feel better. I eat lunch with my daughter everyday because her school is online. And so, we eat Snyder's at lunch because we both love them and love trying the different flavors."

The role of brand is not the same across categories, and some categories like OTC Medications & Vitamins/Supplements, are prime examples of the growing role of price

REASONS FOR PURCHASE BY KEY CATEGORY

 In categories where consumers are becoming more price-sensitive, supporting brand equity now is vital to maintain relevancy

The battle between brand and price is ongoing, and the winner varies by category

WHEN DOES BRAND WIN?

In some categories – especially Cleaning Products – shoppers still feel that National Brands are superior and are unwilling to trade down to something they fear may not get the job done.

Dish Care

Household Cleaners

Brand Affinity

When shoppers develop an emotional connection to their brands, as is the case with indulgent favorites like Cookies and Candy, they are less willing to trade down on price.

Candy

Cookies

WHEN DOES PRICE WIN?

Private Label has long been working to drive trust in their products, leading to more positive perceptions of efficacy to the point where many shoppers feel they are just as effective as National Brands.

OTC Medications

Vitamins, Minerals, & Supplements

'Good Deal'

In some categories with many strong competitors, shoppers are open to switching between a set of trusted brands depending on which has the best value/deal.

Consumers are beginning to look to their brands to similarly offer benefits across both physical and mental health by seeking ‘Wholesome Indulgence’ and ‘Better For You’ options

RE-EMERGING TRENDS: BFY SNACKING & WHOLESOME INDULGENCE

“When I buy treats or snacks like crackers, I prefer whole-grain because its healthier for me and has more fiber.”

“I like the different flavors of Snyder’s but I have been getting their less sodium version because its less salt and that is important for my health. I also choose Snyder’s because it has less salt than Rold Gold.”

“We love brownies – it’s one of our go-to comfort foods – but we’re trying to be healthier these days, so we started getting this almond flour mix instead. I like that it’s gluten free and doesn’t make me feel as guilty when I eat it.”

“I love chocolate, I feel like it’s good for your body and your mind. Chocolate can give you energy, can help with your mood, and is perfect throughout the year. At the beginning of COVID I was buying more of these because I was at home and stressed more.”

3. SHOPPERS WANT SAFETY WHILE SHOPPING IN-STORE; RETAILER PERFORMANCE IS INCONSISTENT

In-store safety protocols, like mask mandates & 6-feet distance reminders, are well-liked and give shoppers peace of mind while in-store.

Retailers that do not provide high and uniform safety standards will likely lose shoppers making it important for them to ensure protocols meet shopper expectations.

As supply chains have largely caught up, shoppers have resumed their typical replenishment and routine shopping trips rather than partaking in stockpiling behavior.

TRIP MISSIONS

While shoppers are no longer panic-shopping, safety remains top-of-mind for shoppers when going in-store

"I love that the first thing here is a Purell display, so you can easily sanitize... and there's something to sanitize your cart which is great."

As cases continue to increase and local restrictions begin to tighten, stock up behavior may go up but likely not to the levels seen earlier in the pandemic, with fewer shoppers panic shopping and retailers being better prepared.

Many retailers' efforts to make shoppers feel safe are paying off, as most shoppers feel comfortable shopping in-store now, driven by consistent use of key health & safety practices.

"I generally feel pretty safe... they have masks and sanitizers available when you enter and social distancing signs on the floor."

"Masks are required and when I grabbed my cart it was actually wet cause there was somebody outside cleaning them and disinfecting them so it makes me feel a lot better"

Some policies, like special store hours for at-risk populations or one-way aisles, are less effective at driving perceptions of safety. In some instance, these practices may result in more crowds or are inconsistently followed.

Less than 1 in 20 shoppers are looking for one-way aisles or special hours for at-risk populations

“There would be a sign that said shop this direction... but I don't know if they got rid of that because they found it wasn't necessary or because they found shoppers weren't paying attention to it. I would often find you'd go down an aisle and somebody would be coming at you the other way because either they didn't notice it or they didn't care.”

Retailer performance on creating a safe shopping environment is varied. Target and Drug are generally doing a good job while Dollar is underperforming

4. SHOPPERS CONTINUE TO MIGRATE ONLINE; FULFILLMENT OPTIONS & EXPERIENCE DRIVE RETAILER SELECTION

As shoppers look to find a safer alternative to in-store shopping, they continue turning to eCommerce as a safe, convenient option eCommerce should remain an area of investment. Offering safe, convenient, and innovative fulfillment options can help drive retailer share & loyalty.

Safety is an overarching concern that has led many shoppers to shift their purchasing online. As shoppers seek to minimize their exposure to others outside their households, eCommerce will continue to play a sizable role.

The pandemic continues to drive more shoppers online, as they seek safer ways to shop. Ensuring shoppers have safe, convenient fulfillment options will help retailers win and drive shopper loyalty online.

As eCommerce continues to grow, Fulfillment is where retailers must win. Offering preferred options that prioritize speed & flexibility should be a primary focus for retailers.

5. IN-STORE DISPLAYS ARE BECOMING MORE CRITICAL TO WIN

Displays are playing a bigger role, and those that highlight market-leading, favorite brands or offer a one-stop shop for a particular occasion are most effective

CPG brands should continue to invest in displays but do so with best practices in mind. Online, ads & tags should also be prioritized.

Shoppers are open to exploration and are willing to stop at displays – more so than they were before the pandemic. Continue to leverage displays as an effective in-store tactic.

Displays serve as a convenient touchpoint for many shoppers in-store, and displays that either provide a one-stop shop for a particular occasion or highlight market-leading brands are most effective.

IN-STORE DISPLAY STRATEGIES

ONE-STOP SHOP

Multi-brand displays that cover multiple category segments

Why They Work

- ✓ Convenient
- ✓ Multiple leading brands have more stopping power
- ✓ Shoppers can quickly find their typical brand and avoid a trip down the aisle

"The display is well stocked with a variety of products to choose from like candles, sprays and has holiday scents which I love."

SINGLE BRAND FAVORITES

Single-brand displays highlighting the market leader

Why They Work

- ✓ Brands are as important as ever and having a leading brand on display grabs attention
- ✓ May help drive impulse and act as a reminder for shoppers to pick this category up

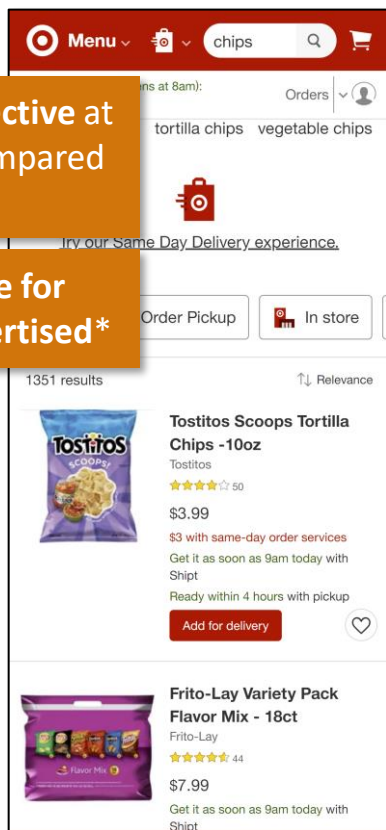

Online, Ads/Tags are a more effective tool at driving Notice than incentives. As major holiday sales move even more online, an effective ad/tag strategy should be a top priority to catching shopper attention.

ECOMM ACTIVITIES

Ads are 2x more effective at driving Notice as compared to Incentives

6. HOLIDAY TRADITIONS WILL BE A SOURCE OF COMFORT DESPITE SMALLER GATHERINGS

The upcoming holidays will be a difficult time for many, as they deal with losses from the pandemic or are kept away from their family due to safety concerns

Holidays present a great time to reconnect with your consumer and re-establish and strengthen the emotional role your brand plays in their lives

While nearly all consumer intend to still celebrate the upcoming holidays, those celebrations will look different with fewer people in attendance.

CHANGES IN HOLIDAY CELEBRATIONS

While the size of gatherings and the location of a celebration may change, consumers are looking to maintain the heart of their traditions.

HALLOWEEN

While larger Halloween celebrations (e.g., church trunk-or-treat, town parade, mall trick-or treat) were canceled, many parents still found ways to celebrate either with family or close neighbors or more traditionally but with masks and social distancing.

"For Halloween, our neighborhood is actually going to do trick or treating so we will walk around and pass out candy that way still staying in social distancing."

"I am planning on going over to my sister's house for Halloween... It's only going to be my two kids and her two kids. So it's not going to be a big crowd."

"For Halloween, we're doing drive through trick-or-treating. So we're going to try that, of course, wearing our mask and staying social distant, we won't be walking around trick or treating house to house."

THANKSGIVING & WINTER HOLIDAYS

Changes to Thanksgiving and Christmas primarily involve smaller in-person gatherings and more virtual celebrations, in lieu of large extended family and friends parties. Some do still plan to travel, but they will stick to smaller groups and only visit close family that are not part of high-risk groups.

"Pretty much with just immediate family, possibly travel out of state to go visit some relatives out of state, but it just will be small gathering of 10 or less compared to past years where we've all gotten together and, you know, had more than 30 people in the house is no longer the thing at this time."

"We'll just invite the closest people that we know that we've been around, but we're still going to try to celebrate it like we do. It's just going to be more Zoom or Google Meets just so people are safe, especially for the like older folks."

"Thanksgiving and Christmas, we might just spend time at home cooking and cook and just try to stay healthy and try to stay away from the disease and basically just stay at home and do our own thing."

The upcoming holidays will be a difficult time for many, as they deal with losses from the pandemic or are kept away from their family due to safety concerns; however, they also offer an opportunity for healing through familiar traditions and spending time with those closest to them.

“That’s what sucks... holidays are a family time and you just want to see everybody. And then right now, being isolated, a lot of people – a lot of the elders – this is the time whenever they[get to] see nieces, aunts, uncles, cousins, grandkids. And so, I mean, it may or may not happen this year, and that just makes me feel sad.”

“We always just stay home Christmas Day open presents do our little traditions keep it simple and keep that.”

“I cope and manage the stress – to help protect my health and my family’s health – by eating good food that I like, such as my traditional culture food and then keeping my house smelling nice with candles like these.”
